

DON'T TAKE THE BAIT: WORKING WITH RELUCTANT CLIENTS

Objectives:

1. To learn to identify the psychodynamic process of projective identification.
2. To identify the individual helping professional's motivation for continuing in the work.
3. To learn to use a "strength's perspective" to motivate involuntary clients.

Bibliography:

Cotton, Nancy, Lessons from the Lion's Den. Jossey Bass. 1993.

Chu, James, "Ten Traps When Working With Trauma Survivors," Dissociation. Copies of this article can be ordered by calling 617-855-2350.

*Figley, Charles (ed.) Compassion Fatigue: Coping with Secondary Stress Disorder in Those Who Treat the Traumatized, Brunner/Mazel, 1995.

Flannery, Ray. Becoming Stress Resistant. DC Health/Lexington Books, 1992.

Jenkins, Alan. Invitation to Responsibility: The Therapeutic Engagement of Men Who Are Violent and Abusive, Dulwich Centre Publications, Adelaide, South Australia, 1990.

*Saakvitne, Karen and Laurie Pearlman. Transforming the Pain: A Workbook on Vicarious Traumatization, WW Norton Books, 1996. □